

Dear FCC, I do not approve of this proposed regulation. Near-perfect digital copies can be made from CD and DVD; restricting broadcast isn't going to solve copyright-infringement problems. Also you are infringing on the consumer's fair-use rights. I tape movies for future viewing all the time, but that's as far as it goes. The same type of "scare" occurred years ago when radio was becoming popular, and phonographs, and magnetic tape, and videotape. None of those developments killed an industry, and we enjoy numerous benefits as a result. Don't stifle development or freedoms. Thank you.
